

Jason Tapani

Human Rights Education Institute, Past President

Native to north Idaho, Jason graduated from Lewis-Clark State College in 2009 with Bachelor of Arts degree in Communication Arts. Jason has held various positions throughout his professional career that display his willingness to give back to his community. Jason served as a Coaching and Development supervisor for Center Partners in Post Falls, as a care giver for Addus Health in Coeur d'Alene, as a Sign Language Interpreter, and now as a Service Manager with US Bank in Coeur d'Alene.

Jason has a long history of giving back to the north Idaho community and working with the Human Rights Education Institute. Before completing his education, Jason worked closely with Tony Stewart, a leading human rights advocate in the region, to bring human rights awareness to northern Idaho. While completing his undergraduate degree Jason worked with the Human Rights Education Institute to update communication information. In 2016, Jason was elected to the Human Rights Education Institute's Board of Directors where he has continuously served the northern Idaho community various capacities since.
